Policy on Academic Honesty

The student is referred to the Academic Honesty subsection of the Academic Regulations and Degree Requirements section of the Undergraduate Studies catalog. The following two paragraphs are taken from there:

In brief form, infractions of the academic honesty policy include any conduct that a reasonable person in the same or similar circumstances would recognize as dishonest or improper in an academic setting such as obtaining test questions or answers to questions and responses to assigned work in any fashion other than that designated as proper by the instructor of the class involved, falsifying records and results of academic work, or falsely presenting someone else's work as one's own.

The penalties for confirmed breaches of this policy shall be commensurate with the nature of the offense and with the record of the student regarding any previous infractions. They will range from a lowered grade or failure on an examination or assignment or failure in the course, to probation or temporary or permanent suspension from the university, or a combination of these.

It is the responsibility of the faculty and students to discourage academic dishonesty by exercising appropriate precautions in situations where infractions may occur and by properly reporting instances of such infractions.

The following list enumerates SOME of the conduct that is prohibited unless the instructor explicitly states otherwise:

Copying, modifying or studying another student's program for this semester or similar programs form previous semesters.

Copying, modifying or studying another student's homework for this semester or similar homework form previous semesters.

Copying from another student during an examination. More generally, using any source of information not explicitly allowed by the instructor during an examination.

Allowing another student to copy, modify or study your program or homework for this semester or similar program or homework from previous semesters. Allowing another student to copy during an examination. This is as serious an infraction as doing the copying.

Cooperation among students on a program or homework, even if none of the students directly copies from another. This does not prohibit students from studying together for examinations or helping each other understand the course material or basic material about computer systems/programming

By signing my name below I affirm that I have read the policy stated above, and that I agree to abide by this policy while enrolled in COSC7350 in the fall of 1999.

______________________________ _______________________________ __________
name (print) signature date

In addition, I certify that I have completed COSC6350, which is a prerequisite of this course, with a passing grade.

______________________________ _______________________________ __________
name (print) signature date